New Product Launch

Customer Background:

Dry, Inc. used its core competency in apparel technology to successfully launch a new product, WOOLITE® Dry Cleaner's Secret®. The cleaning cloths are available to consumers and help to freshen clothing and remove small spots at a fraction of the cost of professional dry cleaning. The launch of this product was all the more successful because Dry, Inc. teamed up with Reckitt Benckiser to license the Woolite® brand as part of the product offering. The products are sold in a variety of grocery, drug and mass merchant stores across the U.S and Canada.

"The Woolmark Company, owner of the world famous Woolite® and the world's leading wool textile organization, endorses the WOOLITE® Dry Cleaner's Secret® process and at home dry cleaning product for refreshing garments safely at home. "We've found this at home dry cleaning product is one of the gentlest ways to care for wool garments and endorse this brand in between dry cleanings", said Carl Brescia, Vice President Sales for The Woolmark Company.

Dry, Inc. also introduced a high tech laundry detergent named "ProWash™ Activewear Detergent"; this product is designed to "target perspiration and odor molecules in the wicking of garment which ordinary detergents cover with perfume.

This innovation actually removes odor molecules and detergent residues left by ordinary detergents." These two products are packaged in various configurations from a single pack to a multiple packed box set.

Business Challenge:

Dry, Inc. is successful in distributing its products nationally to retailers and to consumers online. It was confronted by various hurdles when managing special projects requiring one source to oversee logistical matters such as kitting, packaging, storing, distributing and inventory management. Dry, Inc. emphasized that access to real time inventory was crucial.

A central single source solution was invaluable. The company's resources and business partners were located in different parts of the U.S. ASW had the role of coordinating Dry, Inc.'s management, manufacturing locations, and product warehousing in multiple geographic locations. Without central coordination Dry, Inc. would lose its strategic advantages.

Dry, Inc. concluded it wanted a partner who would "consolidate & enhance" its supply chain process: from product storage, strategic packaging, consumer fulfillment and inventory management - through to delivery.

Solution:

Dry, Inc.'s Director of Manufacturing conducted an extensive assessment and tour of multiple facilities and interviewed numerous organizations to understand the inner workings of their organizations. The Director had specific criteria that she defined as a "good match".
